sible for the men to march further. They had only come from Vienan, about six miles, and it was not more than six and a half wiles. further to Centreville-in all a march of twelve and a balf miles; but the men were foot weary, not so much, I was told, by the distance marched, as by the time they had been on foot, caused by the obstructions, in the road, and the slow pace we had to more to avoid ambuscades. The men were moreover, unaccustomed to marching, their bodies not in condition for that kind of work, and not used to carrying even the loss of light marching order.

We crossed Bull's Run with about 18,000 men of all arms, the Ean division (Miles' and Richardson's brigade) on the left, at Black-burn's ford to Centreville, and Schenck's brigade, of Tyler's division, on the left of the road, near the stone bridge, not participating in the main action. The numbers opposed to us have been variously estimated, I may safely say, and avoid even the appearance of exaggeration, that the enemy brought up all be could which were not kept engaged elsewhere. He had notice of our coming on the 17th, and had from that time until the 21st to bring up whatever he had. It is known that in cetimating the force to go against Manassas, I engaged not to have to do with the enemy's forces under Johnston, then kept in check in the valley by Major-General Patterson, or those kept engaged by Major-General Butler, and I know every effort was made by the General-in-Chief that this should be done, and even if Johnson Joined Beauregard, it would not be because he could be followed by General Patterson, but from causes not necessary for me to refer to, he knew them all. This was not done, and the enemy was free to assemble from every direction in numhers only limited by the amount of the railroad rolling stock and his supply of provisions. To the forces, therefore, we drove in from Fairfax Court House, Fairfax Station, Germantown and Centreville, and those under under Beauregard at Manassas, must be added those under Johnston from Winchester, and those brought up by Davis from Richmond to other places at the South, to which is to be added the levy en masse ordered by the Richmond authorities, which was ordered to assemble at Manassas. What this amounted to I cannot say-certainly much more than we attacked them with.

I could not, as I have said, more early push on faster, nor could I delay. A large and the best part f my forces were three months volnateers, whose term of service was about to expire, but who were sent forward as having long enough to serve for the purpose of the expedition. On the eve of the battle the Fourth Pennsylvania regiment of volunteers, and the battery of the volunteer artillery of the New York Eighth militia, whose term of service expired, insisted on their discharge .-I wrote to the regiment, expressing a request for them to remain a short time, the Hon. Secretary of War, who was at the time on the ground, tried to induce the battery to remain at least five days. But in vain. They insist. ed on their discharge that night. It was granted, and the next morning, when the army moved forward into battle, these troops moved to the rear to the sound of the enemy's caunon

In the next few days, day by day, I should have lost ten thousand of the best armed, drilled, officered and disciplined troops in the army. In other words, every daywhich added to the strength of the enemy made us weaker.

In conclusion, I desire to say, in reference to the events of the 21st ultimo, that the general order for the battle to which I referred was, with slight modifications, literally conformed to; that the corps were brought over Bull's Run in the manner proposed, and put into action as before arranged, and that up to late in the afternoon every movement ordered and carrying us successfully to the object we had proposed before starting-that of getting to the railroad leading from Manasans to the valley of Virginia, and going on it far enough to break up and destroy the communication and interveine between the forces under Beauregard and those under Johnston. And could we have fough a day or a few hours sooner, there is everything to show how we could have continued successful, even against the odds with which we contended: I have the bonor to be, very respectfully, your most obedient servant.

IRWIN McDOWELL, Brigadier General, Commanding.

AN UNTINELY WEDDING APPROACHING .- A wedding is on the topis in New York, which excites much gossip. The Nestor of Presbyterian clergymen, an octogeniarian in years, but a widower of only a few months, is about to marry a maiden of at least half a century of age, with solid charms amounting to about $200,000. Taking all the circumstances into consideration, one would be tempted to apply to this case the old phrase about "Winter lingering in the lap of Spring."-New York

ADDITION TO THE FEDERAL NAVY .- The Washington Star says : The Navy Department have, at this moment, sixty additional vessels under construction and fitting out to participate in the work of closing the peris and guarding the coasts of Secessia. Almost daily some of them are quietly departing for their respective stations. Every available ship yard on the Atlantic coast, as well as all our navy yards, are alive with busy work upon them. In sixty days they will all probably be in commission.
